Attempting not to be reminiscent of a final statement in a typical high school annual, I would like to address my fellow seniors of the class of '92. In the short four years we have been sheltered on this mountain paradise, we have stood witness to progressive events about which our children will some day read in history books: from the war in the Gulf to the end of socialism in the former U.S.S.R. Moreover, in keeping with Sewanee's firm tie with the Episcopal Church, we have seen how the Church has attempted to begin its venture into the twenty-first century. The views of the Episcopal Church's members nationwide are invariably reflected in Sewanee, which exists almost as a microcosm of the national church. Since our freshman year we have experienced not only the first woman to be elected into the episcopate, and debates over things such as inclusiveness in the liturgy, but we have also been forced face the delicate questions concerning sexuality in twenty-first century society, and homosexuality in the priesthood. Some reforms which have caused the main-stream of Episcopalians to deviate from the rich heritage of the Anglican tradition have created feelings of discomfort among a significant number of the church's members. I feel that the intellectual environment of the college of the arts and sciences has allowed for undergraduates to have healthy dialogues concerning the differences we feel about the events which have occurred in both church and state. I hope that the University will continue to foster an environment which will be comprehensive of a community representing a wide spectrum of thought.

In commencing from this place on the 17th of May 1992, many of you will begin careers which will place you in positions of high influence in your respective communities. Many of you will be instrumental in leading not only the New South but indeed other parts of our country into the twenty-first century. It will be our duty to use our resources to make a positive mark on our respective vocations. Moreover, we must do all in our power to heal, rather than hurt the church, with which the success or the demise of our beloved alma mater Sewanee is directly linked.

The four years we have spent together have proved to be an invaluable growing experience which I will not soon forget. God bless you all. I remain,

Sincerely yours,

Well, it's springtime in Sewanee again, and the Mountain is slowly coming to life. In many ways, it is difficult to believe that this is already my junior year here, and that I've seen the cycle of Sewanee life complete itself nearly three times. At the same time, though, I feel like I've been here forever, that this intimate little community has somehow always been a part of my life.

Sewanee is comfortable for me now. The novelty of her many unique elements has worn off: the direct effects of the roaming dogs, the foggy mornings and the festive Convocations have become less important. In their place, something less definitive yet even more fulfilling is beginning to emerge. I think that it is as a junior that most of us begin to ponder how our individual role in this idyllic college existence fits into the higher scheme of things.

As my thoughts drift more and more toward seeking the higher purpose that seems to elevate Sewanee life far beyond the realm of a mere college education, I am reminded of a few lines from Bishop Thomas Gailor's "Sewanee Hymn":

"... Give Thy Children on this Mountain
Grace and power Thy Truth to know;
Open here a living fountain,
Whence Thy Praise shall ever flow."

Perhaps I am beginning to discover the true task, as well as the potential reward, of a Sewanee education.

People always asked me "What is there to do on that mountain, anyway?" Well, the truth was that there's so much to do that I hardly ever had time to stop and think, and barely enough time to do homework. Becoming a sophomore hit me hard because I realized that I could no longer use my freshman status as an excuse. Soon, classes got serious and my involvement with extracurricular activities escalated. Perhaps my many activities outside my classes was an escape from the rigorous school work. However, when added to my academic work, my extracurricular activities did constitute one great "college experience."

As an assistant proctor, I was able to get to know freshmen as well as help them adjust to college life, particularly to Sewanee life. I was also on the Student Disciplinary Committee, which was great experience and an honor to make decisions on behalf of the student body. My involvement with the Theta Pi Sorority rounded out my involvement outside the classrooms, except for tennis. The tennis team membership forced me to use time efficiently, insuring that I would have enough time to study. This relationship between extracurricular activities and academics is a source for many Sewanee students' philosophy of working hard and playing hard.

Returning to the original question, "What was there to do on that mountain?" I answered confidently, "alot!" And as a sophomore at Sewanee, I dove into a large number of activities, and I enjoyed my business immensely.

Rising from high school to college was a memorable adventure. The Domain of the University stood as a new frontier of classrooms and personal discovery. Soon after I drove up the mountain at the beginning of my freshmen year, I discovered the close-knit and exciting people and environment of Sewanee. What ever the reason freshmen were attracted to Sewanee, each embraced the traditions and lifestyles of the community by becoming its newest members.

All my apprehensions were immediately dispelled as I entered our friendly campus. Those first few weeks were busy with organizing my room, touring the domain, and making new friends. It seemed that each new face was met by many other smiling faces of older students and faculty members. Along with the rest of my class, I quickly felt at home, and after the first few weeks of adjustment, I knew that I was in the right place.

In Dedication To Tom Costen

When Tom Costen's A-6 attack bomber was shot down over Iraq during the Persian Gulf War, the impact of his loss was felt throughout the Sewanee community. Many who did not know him were affected, in part, because he exemplified the best of the values of Sewanee. While at Sewanee and after his graduation, he always maintained a variety of interests, pursuing each with an energy that reflected a genuine love of life. Through his interest in music he conveyed to others his bright outlook. His unique sense of life could also be seen in the passion he had for flying. But beyond his remarkable character, his loss affected both graduates and undergraduates because his goals and aspirations seemed to be so close to our own. In honor of the values he embodied, we dedicate this Cap and Gown in the memory of Tom Costen.

Mercedes —

Congratulations! We are all so proud of you — you have grown beyond my expectations in the last four years. I like that Southern influence.

You have given me so many memories in the last twenty-two years — dance, riding, school, parties ... I especially enjoyed all those early hours and late ones in the car going to all those horse shows!

Keep that smile and that determination always — you are a winner.

KATHY AFTER HER FIRST AEROBICS CLASS

From a "Beautiful Baby" winner in '72 to a University of The South grad in '92.
Much has occurred — much has been seen
Much joy, much laughter sandwiched between!

Arm-rest chats, Mr. Icicle and turn at the Big "T"
Learning to count, piano lessons and building a snow SNOOPY.
Dance recitals, Brownies and a myriad of school plays.
Years have past but each wonderful memory stays!

St. Mark's, Childrens, SGA and choral singing too
Your gift of helping others is love shining through.
Drive, determination are the seeds of your success
Bearden, Sewanee cultivation gave growth with the best!

Accolades, awards were many indeed,
so to the memories of Gorgas, Quintard and ADT.
Blessed we have been through all that you do
Seeking God first and letting HIS love shine
through!

As the Sewanee chapter comes to a close,
what the future holds — only HE knows.
Much will happen — much to be seen
Much joy, much laughter and realized dreams!

Time spent at Sewanee involves entrances and exits . . . comings and goings. Moving from one group of students, one social group, one academic area, one spiritual level, to another is a process in which students and faculty alike participate. These comings and goings constitute growth, choices, and changes, which are a part of the fabric of Sewanee and become a part of those who participate in life at the University of the South. Whether one moves gracefully or rigidly along this path varies with each individual and with the time in their life. What is sure in this complex combination of time, place, space and movement is that Sewanee provides a positive and sure place from which to address this growth. In knowing that one has a base which has secure roots each individual is allowed to risk growth and change. This may involve shooting boldly upward into an atmosphere filled with challenges or may result in digging roots more deeply into the firmament seeking a more solid base. In either case, a belief in the validity those roots, belief that certain absolutes and values comprise them, gives the individual who passing through the portals and colonnades of Sewanee the freedom to risk personal and spiritual development.
